Monetary and financial decolonisation in Africa in the 20th Century

9 - 10 October 2017

Banco de Portugal, Lisbon, Portugal

Monetary and fiscal processes are important elements in state building and in managing international economic relations for emerging economies and new states. These processes were also important during the transition to constitutional independence in Africa. However little attention has been paid to the trajectory of the monetary and fiscal processes of decolonisation in Africa. The objective of this conference is to shed light on a range of different historical cross-experiences of monetary and financial decolonisation. The aim is to provide a comparative analysis of the different regions of the African continent and their particularities often linked to their former connections.

The framework of the conference consists of three main subjects:

1. Did different historical patterns or models of monetary decolonisation co-exist? What were the specifics of the Sterling zone, the Franc zone and the Escudo Zone?
2. How did the monetary transition remodel the domestic financial systems of the new independent states? How did banking relations between former colonial powers and their colonial territories change or adapt during the transformation? How were foreign trade and international investment relationships affected by the monetary transition of post-colonialism?
3. Is there a link between the approach taken with respect to monetary and financial transition and the economic success (emergence) of these countries? If such a correlation exists, how significant is it? What role did international monetary organisations (e.g. IMF) play? To what extent has the establishment of monetary zones affected the former colonies' economic development? Looking at the European Monetary Union today – are there any lessons to be learned from the monetary development of postcolonial African states?
