Can Finance Save the Planet?

Climate Change and its Implications for Investors and Policy Makers

A global youth movement has coalesced in relation to the political lethargy towards climate change. Their force can no longer be ignored by global politics. Yet, what about other actors concerned? How for example does the financial sector influence the climate? Or controversy, how will ongoing environmental changes and political responses affect our money and investments? With this open expert talk we would like to take the opportunity to discuss a long-term view on the topic with pioneering experts in the field.
